

Critical Point Drier

Critical point drier is designed to release suspended structure from a given substrate. Under certain conditions (in terms of pressure and temperature), a liquid can be transferred to gas phase immediately. As a result, “sticking” problems caused by liquid surface tension that often appears upon releasing MEMs structure can be totally eliminated. We use this setup to release our MOEMs devices and other PhC based devices.

Critical point drier